Maxitia Project Inc. is please to announce that it will be providing Community Health Education Workshops for The Latino Commission on AIDS. These workshops are part of the Latino Commission on AIDS Latino Religious Leadership Program. There are 26 affiliated Churches in the program in New York City. Maxitia Project Inc. will be providing monthly workshops to many of the member churches.

The Latino community has deep religious and spiritual roots. Latinos turn to religious leaders for guidance in times of crisis and need. Because HIV/AIDS, Hepatitis and STIs have impacted the lives of tens of thousands of Hispanic/Latinos and their loved ones, it is of critical importance that our spiritual leaders play an active and visible role in addressing the health challenges in our communities. Maxitia Project Inc. seeks to help prepare these religious leaders for this mission by providing them with workshops on community health and wellness.

Since its beginning in 1996, The Latino Religious Leadership Program (LRLP) has established itself as a catalyst for providing health promotion, education and capacity building amongst Latino communities of faith.

The LRLP has partnered with faith-based communities to develop health ministry's where congregants lead health promotion activities with local community partners and enable them to provide education, support, and culturally responsive health related services.

Similarly, the LRLP educates religious leaders on the importance of health screenings, resources and referrals for key social services to reach health equity.

The board members of Maxitia Project have a long relationship with the Latino Commission on AIDS since 1996. We have been providing Educational Work Shops and Medical Care when needed.

We look forward to continuing and expanding this long s standing relationship.
